Participants will learn what robots are, how collaborative robots differ from traditional industrial robots, and how these technologies are used in today's advanced manufacturing and engineering environments. Students will safely operate a robot and be introduced to basic programming through a simple, block-based interface. Throughout the camp, they will complete guided activities that develop problem-solving, logical thinking, and technical skills while programming the robot to perform real-world tasks such as movement and object handling. No prior experience is required. This camp is designed to build confidence with technology while exposing students to high-demand career fields such as robotics, automation, and engineering. STUDENTS SHOULD BRING THEIR OWN SNACKS, LUNCHES, AND DRINKS.
